North Carolina
Facts in Brief

North Carolina Department of Economic and Community Development, 430 N. Salisbury St., Raleigh, NC 27603 919/733-4151

Capital: Raleigh

Demographics: 6,500,000 people live in North Carolina. The state's rate of growth was the seventh highest in the nation during the 1980's. By the year 2000, North Carolina's population is estimated to reach 7,300,000.

North Carolina's Largest Cities, 1990

Charlotte	395,934
Raleigh	207,951
Greensboro	183,521
Winston-Salem	143,485
Durham	136,611

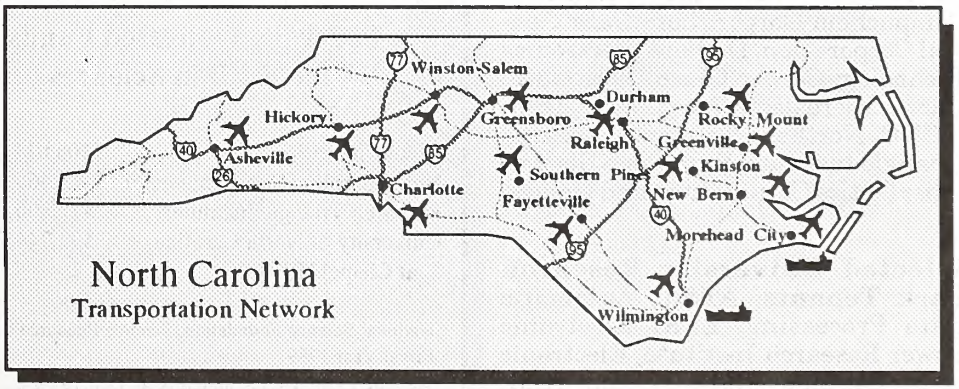
Climate: North Carolina's Sun Belt climate offers moderate temperatures accentuated by four distinct seasons which provide plenty of opportunities for outdoor recreation. Winter weather rarely interferes with business operations and ample rainfall provides abundant water resources.

Banking: Home to three of the nation's 30 largest financial institutions, North Carolina's 16 nationally chartered and 49 state chartered banks have combined in-state assets in excess of $70 billion.

Financial Advantages: Construction, housing, utilities, taxes, and transportation costs are all well below the national average. North Carolina's construction costs are simply the lowest in the nation. Its temperate climate allows construction firms to bring projects in on budget and on time. Additionally, most large cities in North Carolina rank below the national average for the cost of living, with rural areas of the state being even more advantageous.

Exports: North Carolina is a leading player in world commerce, having an estimated positive trade balance of $460 million in 1990. Major exports range from high technology electronics, fiber optics and pharmaceuticals, to furniture, textiles and tobacco. North Carolina's exports and related employment are significantly greater than those of any other Southeastern state. The state's manufacturing exports grew by 22% from 1989 to 1990.

Professional Development Assistance: The Business/Industry Development Division of the North Carolina Department of Economic and Community Development provides personalized help that few states can match in all phases of a prospective company's community/site selection process. With the help of the Business/Industry Division, the state has become the front runner in manufacturing, with a cumulative total of 381 major new industrial facilities from 1986 to 1989. In three of the last four years, Site Selection and Industrial Development magazine has named North Carolina as America's number one choice for new manufacturing plants. The state is also ranked first nationwide in the number of new R&D sites in 1989. In 1990's Eleventh Annual Grant Thornton Manufacturing Climates Study, North Carolina ranked as the state with the most favorable manufacturing climate.



Quality of Life: North Carolina offers a variety of recreational, cultural and educational opportunities for its residents. The state is nationally recognized as offering a quality of living that is second to none. In Rand McNally's Places Rated survey of all U.S. cities, North Carolina had four major metropolitan areas that ranked among the nation's top 40 in livability. In a recent Lou Harris poll, both Charlotte and Raleigh-Durham were identified for the second year in a row as the nation's best mid-sized cities for business locations.

Transportation: The state provides convenient access to the nation's largest markets. North Carolina has the largest state-maintained highway system in the country, enhanced by five interstate highways. The state offers 14 commercial airports, including 2 major hubs, a 3,600-mile rail network and 2 deep-water seaports. Within 700 miles are 150 million U.S. and Canadian consumers, 64 of the nation's 100 largest metro areas and 61% of the U.S. industrial base.

North Carolina Research and Development Centers

North Carolina Department of Economic and Community Development, 430 N. Salisbury St., Raleigh, NC 27603 919/733-4151

In addition to its universities, North Carolina boasts a microelectronics center, a biotechnology research center, a contract research organization, as well as two of the ten largest university related research parks. Research Triangle Park, located between Raleigh and Durham, is internationally recognized as one of America's leading centers for high technology research and development. The 6,700-acre wooded campus is the largest planned research complex in the world. More than 50 corporate, academic and governmental agencies in the Park employ over 32,000 workers and provide an annual payroll in excess of $1 billion. North Carolina's second major research and development center is University Research Park, located in close proximity to the University of North Carolina at Charlotte. The 1,200-acre campus has attracted a mixture of regional and national businesses engaged in research, manufacturing and services. Fifteen companies currently reside in the park, employing over 10,000 people.

Selected Research Triangle Park Tenants: Bell Northern Research, Burroughs Wellcome Company, Compuchem Corporation, Data General Corporation, Du Pont Electronics Technology Center, Glaxo, GTE South, Harris Microelectronics Center, IBM, MCNC, Northern Telecom, Research Triangle Institute, Sumitomo Electric Fiber Optics Corporation, and Unisys.

Selected University Research Park Tenants: AT&T, Automatic Data Processing, EPRI Electronic Power Research Institute, Electronic Data Systems Corporation, IBM, Southern Bell, and Verbatim.

NCSU Research Initiatives

Premiere research universities such as North Carolina State University (NCSU) are prime sources for valuable scientific and technological advances. NCSU researchers developed a technique, atomic layer epitaxy, which could be the basis of new microprocessors that perform electronic and optical operations. Research continues on numerous areas in which NCSU continues to be a leading research center. The combined resources of NCSU's SEMATECH Center of Excellence and its Center for Advanced Electronic Materials Processing, in addition to those of the Microelectronics Center of North Carolina (MCNC), enable the University to remain on the forefront of research and development. NCSU has begun work on its Centennial Campus, an academic village and research center which will bring together academic inquiry and private sector technology in an intimate mix of public and private research facilities. The project will more than double the size of the main campus of the University.

Research Triangle Institute

Research Triangle Institute (RTI) is a not-for-profit contract research organization founded in 1958 by the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, Duke University and North Carolina State University. RTI was created to serve as a focal point for the development of North Carolina's Research Triangle Park, the nation's most successful industrial and government research center. With a staff of 1,500, RTI conducts contract research for government, industry and public service organizations. Research is conducted within seven major research divisions, including the Analytical and Chemical Sciences Division, the Environmental Sciences and Engineering Division, the Chemistry and Life Sciences Division and the Electronics and Systems Division.

MCNC

MCNC is a research and education consortium supported by the State of North Carolina and by private industry. Located in Research Triangle Park, MCNC runs three program areas: microelectronics technology research and development, a telecommunications network, and a supercomputing center. The Semiconductor Research and Technology Division and the Design Research and Technology Division conduct research and development for MCNC. CONCERT, Communications Network in North Carolina for Education, Research and Technology, is a private telecommunications network that interconnects some 1,000 computers at 12 major research and education centers throughout the state. Through the CONCERT network, the North Carolina Supercomputer Center's (NCSC) Cray Y-Mp8/432 supercomputer can be accessed. With these programs, MCNC achieves its objectives of building North Carolina's technical infrastructure, keeping North Carolina's universities at the forefront of high-technology research and education, and promoting collaboration among North Carolina's universities and private industry.

North Carolina
Cost of Living Report

North Carolina Department of Economic & Community Development, 430 North Salisbury St., Raleigh, NC 27603, 919/733-4151

The overall cost of living is one of the most important factors to consider when choosing a new home or a new business location.

By locating in a North Carolina city, purchasing power may be increased because of the low consumer costs.

The Inter-City Cost of Living Index, published quarterly by the American Chamber of Commerce Researchers Association, provides objective price comparisons among the nation's larger cities. A price index for each city reflects the typical purchasing patterns of a middle management executive family of four for a selected group of goods and services. Those purchases occur in six general categories: grocery items, utilities, housing, transportation, health care, and miscellaneous goods and services. Price comparisons among cities can be made relative to the U.S. national index city average of 100.0.
